

LEFT IN AN OARLESS BOAT.

ERRIBLE SUFFERINGS OF A SHIP- WRECKED CREW AT SEA.

Three Men Dying from Cold and Hunger and the Remaining Five Badly Frozen.—Three Days and Nights Before they were Rescued.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Jan. 6.—Fuller details the sufferings of the shipwrecked crew of the schooner Almon Bird of Rockland, Me., described in yesterday's despatches, have been obtained to-day from the survivors, who are being tenderly nursed by a large volunteer force of ladies at the boarding house in O'clock. As Capt. Saunders of Pileon Cove was about thirty miles northeast of Rockport his schooner fishing, he discovered an open boat filled with men. On sailing up to see what the boat contained two dead and two living men. The latter were frozen purple and he took them to the schooner. The men were encased with blood. They were lifted aboard the schooner, and the story of their sufferings was told in broken fragments. The coasting schooner Almon Bird, of Rockland, Me., Capt. C. A. Packard, was bound from Windsor, N. S., for Alexandria, Va., with a cargo of plaster. On Sunday night, when off Boatswain's Bay, the vessel was overtaken by a freezing beam sea so thickly covered with ice that it was almost impossible to maneuver. The sea was almost white with ice. Monday morning the ice was so thick that the vessel was driven up on the shore, and flooded the vessel. Soon it floated free, but the men were so cold that they were taken to the large boat. There was little time to get food or extra clothing, and

On the schoolhouse bank, but the boat was left behind, and the men, living in the boat, were left in a heavy snarl. Thus they drifted about, crowded together for protection from the bitter cold, and almost hopeless of rescue. On Tuesday morning, the men were frozen and numb, they saw a sail and made an effort to attract attention, but in vain, and they crouched down, almost blind. On Wednesday they suffered terribly from hunger and cold. On Thursday a man became crazed and threw himself into the boat in their delirium. Toward night one of the men went to sleep in the bottom of Wounded men also died. There were three dead and five living men in the boat. The living, suffering the pangs of hunger, and hopeless of relief, held a consultation, the result of which was that they opened the veins in the neck of one of their dead comrades, and wet their lips and throat with the warm blood. On Thursday morning they were rescued by Capt. Saunders. Capt. Packard's feet were badly frozen, although he may possibly recover the use of them. The other men also had badly frozen feet and hands.

The performances of the "Snake Charmer," which was to have held the boards of the Brooklyn Academy of Music all of this week, have been interrupted by a quarrel between Miss Solina Deloro, the star of the Grand Opera Comique Company, and Alexander Julien Losses the manager and proprietor. The quarrel is said to have been caused by Miss Deloro's suspicions that

On a young woman of much refined talent and beauty, the rumors which reached her related, was being spread by a newspaper editor.

DeLara refused to believe, as Mr. DeFensor assured that the rumors were not true, and her suspicions increased when she found that a young woman was leaving for her part in the afternoons on Academy stage. She therefore began a suit for her money. On Thursday Justice Barrett issued an attachment against the proprietors of the station of the "St. Louis Courier," and was served with the writ, signed by the court, which is said

A Youth's attempt at suicide.
William Schuyler, aged 19 years, who shot himself twice, in front of the house at 121st and 11th street, Brooklyn, on Thursday night, lies in a critical condition in St. Catherine's Hospital. One wound went into his forehead and the other into the left arm near his shoulder. He was employed by James M. Arrell, a wholesale dealer of 239 Broadway street, as a messenger. He was shot when he was on his rounds at his employer's house on Thursday last.

Theodosius A. Fowler's Death.—
Thirty years ago, when Bleecker street was a habitable thoroughfare, there lived in one of the houses on De la Rue a rich man named Theodosius Fowler.
He was a well-to-do citizen, a member of the board of aldermen, living in the same street as the Fowler was a prominent member of St. Thomas's church when it stood on the corner of Broadway and Houston street. Theodosius A. Fowler was dead at Bellevue Park, New Jersey.
Recently, was a son of the gentleman, of De la Rue Consecration by Archbishop Corrigan.

The marble altar in the Church of the Redemption, Mott street, will be consecrated tomorrow forenoon at 11 o'clock by Archbishop Corrigan.

celebration of the altar. Pontifical High Mass will be celebrated with Archbishop Corrigan as celebrant. Rev. John J. Keane as deacon, the Rev. Thomas F. Rice as sub-deacon, and the Rev. Charles E. Nelson as master of ceremonies. The Rev. Thos. F. Lynch, curate of St. Ann's, is now in charge of this church.

Mrs. O'Gorman's Brief Widowhood.
While Michael O'Gorman of 406 East Elev-was carousing with a number of companions in her is. Michael died, and his body was sent to the gus. His four children were placed in charitable institutions. Mrs. O'Gorman was arrested and was sent to six months on the island. Yesterday morning was found dead in her cell. Verdict, alcoholism.

An Unsafe Market Building.
Among the buildings reported unsafe yester-

W. West, and W. Livingston streets. Four of the granaries on the Washington street side, which support the second story, are out of plumb and unable to fail. The entire roof is leaky and in bad condition.

The Signal Office Prediction.
Only rising temperature, southerly to west winds, and occasional rains followed by clearing weather & barometric fall.

Emperor of Russia has pardoned the Polish patriots jailed in 1904.

Fixed Central Railroad, extending from Jackson to Little Rock, was sold yesterday to Sir Edward for $250,000.

Delaware. River at Boudin town, N. J., is frozen solid to more than the river banks. Ice often takes the form of snow. The ice in ponds is 4 to 12 inches thick.

Rev. R. A. Horvath of St. John's, Va., recently filled a barrel of lard and buried it in a field with surface business, but he has found it in the barn on his farm.

He was an influential industrialist in Western, was known as a philanthropist, and died soon after being taken to the hospital by a heart ailment.

Dr. A. Adams, the city medical superintendent of Philadelphia, said that the doctor who treated him was disappointed in a number of ways. The patient was not as ill as he had been told, and he was not as ill as he had been told. The patient was not as ill as he had been told, and he was not as ill as he had been told.

part town, a railroad, where he, at Ashley, Pa., to find a systematic case yesterday, was going to do. It was the latest of the given brothers who continued in the matter. S. L. H. Miles told some ago, who lived on main line at that time.

habit is second nature." Contrast the habit reader, says Keppner Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. —Ade.

Copyright © 2006 John Wiley & Sons, Ltd.